

CODE OF REGULATIONS

WHAT ARE THE CODE OF REGULATIONS?

- Ohio North called their foundational document their bylaws. Ohio South referred to a constitution. Ohio Revised Code for non-profits indicates that these should be called an organization's Code of Regulations.
- This statutory terminology, even though different for both organizations, seemed to be the way to go to avoid confusion for its members
- With information and survey results from both organizations, the merger gave the integration team, and both boards, the opportunity to re-write and create a model state association that is based on its members' needs rather than over regulation; simple, flexible, & inclusive
